

Dow Jones News Fund/Dow Jones News Fund Business Reporting Internship Program

To apply to any or all of the DJNF college internship programs, students must complete an online application, attach supporting documentation, and take a test proctored at their college or university. Former professionals (those who have worked full-time on staff as a journalist for a year or more) in the U.S. or abroad are not eligible. Students selected for the college internship programs receive immersive, specialized, all-expenses paid training at universities before their internships, weekly salaries of at least $450 for a minimum of 10 weeks, $1,500 scholarships for students and graduate's federal loans, and access to the Dow Jones News Fund Alumni Network. DJNF also provides one-year memberships to all business reporting interns to the Society of American Business Editors and Writers (SABEW) and the Online News Association (ONA).
